

Dear Coach,

My name is Brad Shauf and am the former head coach at First Baptist Christian in Pasadena, TX. I would like to briefly speak to you about % 2019 G/F Andres Rodriguez.

Andres is a 6-1 wing that averaged about 20ppg, 11rpg, and 2spg for us last year. He has been our team captain and leader on the floor. Andres has dedicated himself to improvement in his all-around game. This summer he has spend significant time improving his shooting percentage from 3pt range (31% last season). I believe he is somewhere between a 35-40% 3pt shooter currently.

There is no doubt Andres is a tough competitor. He has managed to put up very good numbers against top-notch defenders this past season. Perhaps competitiveness is his biggest asset. Andres does not back down from a challenge. He was the only player I could trust to do so last season. Opposing teams understood this, yet he still managed to be successful.

Andres is extremely dedicated to becoming a better player everyday. He was my most trustworthy player at practice each day. I could always rely on the fact that he would be there and give 100% everyday. He challenged his teammates every time on the floor to get better. This is a major leadership characteristic he has been known for.

The major knock on Andres is his lack of size. He typically makes up for so much based upon his fundamentals. I believe he translates as a 2/3 wing at the next level. He can defend, box out, and rebound against taller and longer players. He handles the ball well, has improved his shooting from outside, rebounding is solid, but he also has a high basketball IQ. I believe the ball was dominated a little too much by him last season, but it was difficult to fault due to his ability being much higher than anyone else on the floor. He is very coachable too. I would definitely recommend Andres to play at the collegiate level.
